Inside of the later than the enclosure a miniature town is built, with a theater, shop, bath-houses, tea gardens, cafes, restaurants, lading houses and "ail the comforts of a home." At the gate, which is strictly guarded by armed officers, female infants and fe-males of any age are received and taken care of at Government expense and have a home, such as it is, from the cradle to the grave. The "institution" is attended by a physician, and the Japanese police insure perfect order. It is even con-tended that the manners of the inmates serve as a model to visitors.

A hospital is attached to each institution, where the yellow flag notifies the visitor of "danger." Any one becoming fascinated with an inmate can take her please, but an evil that cannot be supmariner into the spacious harbor of pressed is modified by police and sanitary regulations.

The rising generation serve the restaurant tables, bath-houses, dressing rooms and tea gardens, whilst the veterans of the turf are consigned to the culinary, lavatory and hospital service. The gate is open day and night for the admission of visitors or inmates; but a strict register is kept of all ingress and egress. The gate money is very small, only an itselin, about 40 cents; but visitors are allowed to spend as much as they please in the enclosure for entertain-ment, eating, drinking, theater, books, pictures, paintings and presents. The bathrooms are open for the inspection of visitors during the Japanese abiution. The Japanese never having heard of the rienced residents and observers testify they assume the duties of mated life.
